

CEO confidence falls to lowest level in 3 years

CEOs expressed greater concerns about the U.S. economic outlook as well as their own firms' prospects in the Q2 2016 Vistage CEO Confidence Index survey. The Vistage CEO Confidence index and all of its components fell to their lowest level in three years, down to 88.8 from last year's 99.0.

The top issues CEOs are facing include finding, hiring, and retaining talent, as well as developing new products or services to grow their customer base. In addition, political and economic uncertainty, as well as continued global weakness, are weighing on CEOs. Moderate levels of economic uncertainty can prompt more prudent investment and hiring behavior; and extreme levels, which are not now present, can cause retrenchment. Prospective policies of the current presidential candidates and their electability will need much more clarification in order to have a significant impact on CEO confidence.

Vistage CEO Confidence Index Highlights

21% of all CEOs thought that the national economy had improved during the past year, less than half of last year's 46%. Just 20% expect the economy to improve in the year ahead, down from 35% a year ago.

40% of CEOs plan to increase spending in new plant and equipment, the lowest level in three years.

50% of CEOs plan to expand their workforce in the next year, and only 8% of CEOs plan cutbacks.

34% of CEOs said finding, hiring, retaining and training their employees is the most significant business issue they are currently facing.

64% of all firms have adapted their management style to younger workers, with 57% offering specially designed benefit packages to attract young talent.

The Vistage CEO Confidence Index was 88.8 in the 2nd quarter 2016 survey, down from last quarter's 92.3 and last year's 99.0.
