Challenge	Solution
 You're concerned that larger potential clients see your firm as too small, inadequate and unproven, so you avoid pursuing these opportunities.	→ Gain insight into how other respected professionals have transformed themselves as leaders and employed strategies to position their firms to tackle larger projects.
 You're inundated with back-office work just to keep things afloat and haven't focused enough time on how to scale and grow your business.	→ Free yourself to do more business development by learning how others successfully delegated day-to-day operations.
 You're losing business to less-qualified competitors due to a lack of visibility in the market, despite your strong reputation with existing clients.	→ Learn how to demonstrate your expertise to a broader audience – a community of like-minded, high-integrity executives focused on each other's success.
 You're worried that your culture has become too informal, delivering inconsistent service standards and jeopardizing your reputation in the marketplace.	→ Discover how other leaders have instilled a strong culture and business processes to maintain a consistently high level of service.
